

Nomination Form

BC Museums Association is accepting nominations for projects making a substantial contribution to BC's cultural sector for its upcoming issue of Roundup Magazine. Selected winners will be featured in Roundup's winter 2018 issue, Change Makers. Change Makers is an annual theme aimed at celebrating the sector and the exceptional and innovative projects that make it great.

Nominations are encouraged for projects from across BC who demonstrate innovation, imagination and advancement in the field. Nominations are encouraged from those who consider their projects to be "socially innovative", whether it's a large-scale technology initiative or a new advancement in a small town. Nominated projects can represent various sectors including leadership, education, exhibition design, archives, customer services, technology, communications or marketing. Project participants can be paid staff or volunteers.

Criteria:

- Project participants must be currently working or volunteering in the cultural sector.
- Project participants who are retired from the cultural sector are eligible.
- Projects may be from non-profit, private or public sectors.
- Self nominations are admissible.

Winners will be selected from the nominees by the Roundup Magazine Editorial Committee, a representative sub-committee of the BCMA. Nominations are encouraged from across BC. A person can nominate more than one project. Not all nominations will be selected for publication. Nominees are not required to be BCMA members.

Nomination Deadline: December 15, 2017

Submission Requirements

Nominations may be submitted by BCMA members or non members and must include:

1. Completed nomination form
2. A detailed letter of nomination (500 words max) with specific, concrete examples that speak to the project's innovation, advocacy, imagination and advancement in the field. Application must demonstrate how the project's contribution has added long or short term value to the field.

If selected, the nominated project participants must chose to accept the nomination and will then supply a biography summarizing the projects and its contribution to the field.

Please submit your completed nomination via email by December 15, 2017 to:
